

The Nordic Journal of Commercial Law

CALL FOR PAPERS!

The Nordic Journal of Commercial Law is calling for original contributions in the field of commercial law to be published in December 2017. Submissions should address commercial law issues of international, regional or domestic character and be relevant to one or more of the Nordic countries. Relevance may be demonstrated by the topic's general applicability to the Nordic commercial sector. All submissions must be in English and followed by a brief resume describing the author's academic qualifications and publication history. Submissions are made by e-mail (editor@njcl.dk) to the secretariat. See the submission guidelines at NJCL.dk for details.

Acceptable topics include, but are not limited to, company law, corporate law, corporate governance, competition law (antitrust), consumer protection, contract law, dispute resolution, environmental law, intellectual property law, international trade law, labour law etc.

NJCL accept original proposals for the following categories:

- Articles: Manuscripts ranging from 4,000 to 12,000 words, approximately 15-40 double-spaced pages, are preferred. A table of contents is recommended, especially for lengthy articles.
- Commentaries and reports: Manuscripts for Reports, Comments and Notes should normally range from 900 to 2700 words in length, approximately 3-9 double-spaced pages.
- Special issue proposals: Proposals designating one or more co-editors, an overarching theme, and an outline of specific contributions to be included in the special issue together with working titles of each contribution. A special issue should aim for minimum 5 contributions.

The Journal is double blind peer-reviewed and open access. See NJCL.DK. The Journal has in the almost 15 years since its conception enjoyed publishing contributions from prominent scholars especially in the fields of international contract and sales law. However, the journal welcomes contributions of an international or Nordic character from all authors. The change in the journal's management means that the lost tradition of publishing Commentaries, Reports, and Notes will be revived, giving in particular young researchers an opportunity to communicate their work to a wider international audience. The Journal will, as a new initiative, accept proposals for special issues and I am delighted to announce that the first special issue is in the pipeline and is due this summer. Special issues are limited in topic and give the opportunity to act as co-editor.

Finally, it should be mentioned that we have chosen to discontinue the e-mail update service. Instead, NJCL is present on Facebook and LinkedIn, so be sure to subscribe to one of those services if you want to receive our updates and calls.
